

Aberglasney Gardens

We went to Aberglasney, a very special trip.
It was as though the bees and butterflies had been invited to a party,
They were everywhere.
The butterflies dancing gaily, mostly white also various and most numerous bees.
Trapped by their need to forage they visited an incredible number and variety of specially selected plants just for their delight, which educated and delighted us.
Caroline, Maggie, Rose and I were greatly enriched
By this wonderful spectacle.
Everywhere we looked was colour, variety, beauty and vibrant life.
However, there were victims of the drought, not many,
Withered, parched, reminding us of nature's power.
A specially humid building housing rare butterflies
Added to our pleasure and education.
The trip was memorable and it was beautifully cool!!

Thank you Val for arranging the trip.

(A poem written by a FONOP member in memory of the trip to Aberglasney and the National Botanic garden)